Senior claims unfair treatment by deans

by Doreen Garrahan

A Montclair State senior feels he was treated unfairly by the administration following an altercation involving himself and a fellow student.

Marc Fanelli, 21, a math and environmental science major, feels Dr. Edward Martin, dean of students and Dr. Domenica Desiderioscioli, acting executive assistant of student affairs, did not respect his rights as a student following an incident in which he was involved in on Sept. 30, in Blanton Hall cafeteria with, Alisa Maffia, a female resident of Bohn.

Neither Fanelli or Maffia wanted to comment on the details surrounding the altercation. Fanelli said he was advised by his attorney not to discuss the incident until the trial.

Fanelli lives off campus, but has a meal plan. He received a letter from the Associate Director of Residence Life, Constance Ford, stating since it was brought to their attention that he was "allegedly involved in a serious incident," he was not permitted to enter any of the residence hall facilities or surrounding areas. Maffia said she did not receive a letter and there has been no administrative action taken against her.

Fanelli signed a complaint Oct. 16 at Campus Police headquarters reporting he had been assaulted in Blanton Hall cafeteria. Maffia also signed a complaint.

Fanelli said he had hoped the administration could mediate between the two and settle their dispute out of court. He said he felt "the ad-

Former Montclarion editor pleads guilty

by Jean Paternoster

The former editorial page editor of The Montclarion was fined $500 and given one year's probation last week after pleading guilty to charges that he assaulted another newspaper staff member on Oct. 8, 1992.

Steve Garufi, a 21 year old senior political science major, was spared a jail sentence by Little Falls municipal court Judge Paul T. Konzelman II, because Garufi presented evidence that he is undergoing weekly sessions with a psychoanalyst.

Garufi, dressed in faded blue jeans ripped just below the seat of his pants, told the judge that the person he assaulted "definitely has a reputation of being obnoxious at times," and that "he (the complainant) said something to me which made me angry."

"I know it was wrong," said Garufi. "He (the complainant) instigated it, but I am guilty of simple assault."

Members of The Montclarion, the victim, and Garufi declined to comment on the incident.

Garufi, presently on indefinite suspension from MSC, was asked by Konzelman if he will be allowed to return to school after he completes his psychiatric treatment. Garufi replied, "Presumably so."

Montclair State's Dean of Students, Edward Martin, could not be reached for comment regarding the possibility of Garufi's return.

Garufi, who transferred here from Morris County College last January, was named editorial page editor of The Montclarion on June 1, 1992. Last spring he wrote a weekly opinion column for the paper called, "American Graffiti."

Clinton sweeps election: campus gives mixed reaction

by Linda Andrade

Presidential candidate Bill Clinton won the election on Tuesday, with only a small lead over George Bush in the popular votes, and an enormous lead over Ross Perot.

Victory was expressed by many Clinton supporters here on campus.

"I'm so glad he won," said Christina DeRonde, 18, of Nutley. "He's the one that will do the job right."

A majority of the students interviewed, as well as faculty members, supported Clinton, and expected him to win.

While these supporters are happy their candidate won, some are still worried about the future.

"I support Clinton, and I'm glad he won," said Steve Rodriguez, 22, of Rutherford. "I just hope he can live up to all of the promises he made. After all, that's why I voted for him."

The majority of Clinton supporters, however, are very optimistic and expect he will do a good job.

President Elect Bill Clinton

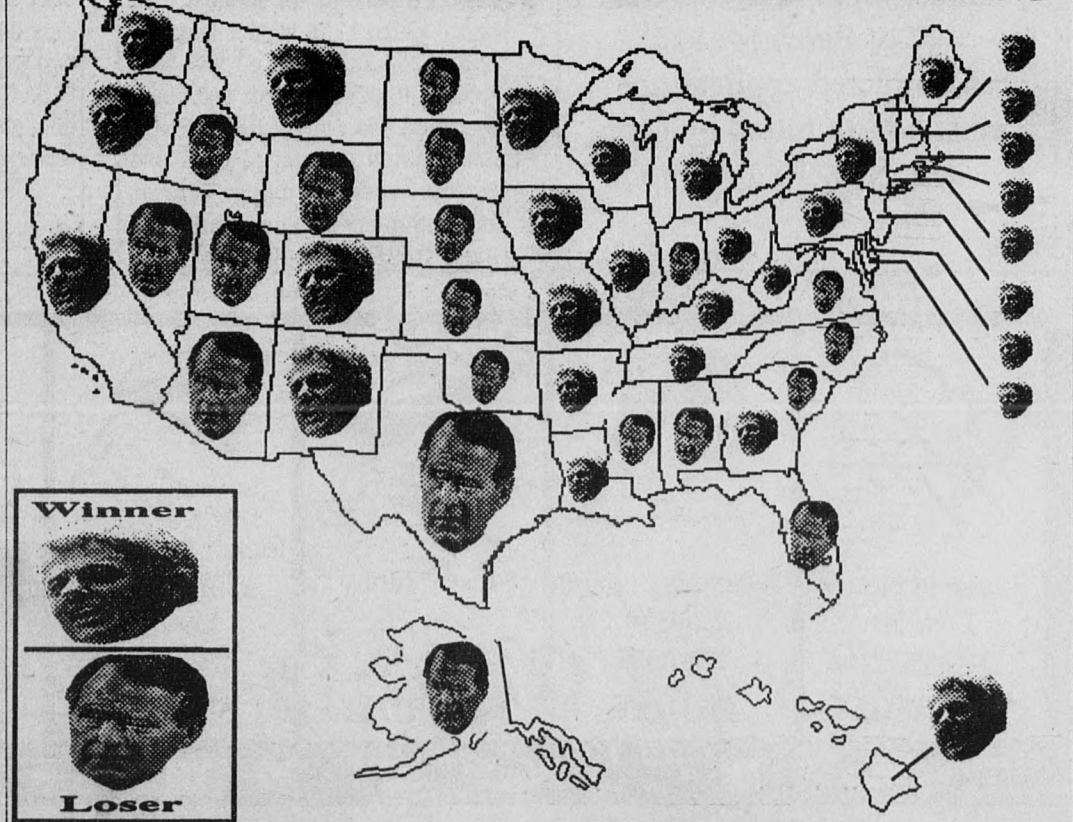

Some Bush and Perot supporters expressed their feelings of disappointment that their candidate did not win. Many feel that Clinton being elected is a big mistake.

"It's too bad," said one Perot supporter, Karen Daniels,

28, of Montclair. "We had the chance to set things straight and they blew it."

One Bush supporter, John Melendes, 19, of Newark, said he was so disgusted, he did not want to discuss it.

INTERNATIONAL

Angola's 16-year-old civil war, once thought ended, is erupting into battle again. Rebels refused to accept a loss in popular elections claiming the government fixed the elections. Fighting seemed to calm in Luanda, the capitol, but fears remain that war may rage in the bush of this South African nation.

In a British survey, women said the number one obstacle to equality in the workplace was the "Old Boy Network." This unofficial and organized group of "men's clubs" gives men the ability to help each other behind the scenes. British women ranked the "Old Boy Network" as more of a problem to their advancement than inadequate child day care and inflexible hours.

Russian troops clashed with Ingush rebels in the Caucasus Mountains. The rebels are fighting North Ossetians to get back land Joseph Stalin took in 1944. Stalin had accused Ingush and Chechenya of collaborating with the Nazis.

George Bush signed a bill that would impose trade sanctions on nations that drift net. The penalties will start being imposed on Pacific nations next year and Atlantic nations in 1994. Thirty mile long drift nets capture all life sizable enough to fit into the net. In 1990 10 percent of Japan's drift nets killed 1758 whales and dolphins, 253,288 tuna, 81,956 blue sharks, 30,464 sea birds and about 3 million other target fish. What is not targeted is dumped back into the water dead or dying. Taiwan, Japan, South Korea and France use these "walls of death."

NATIONAL

Bill Clinton will be the next President of the United States barring some extraordinary event. He will be the 42nd President and only the second Democrat since 1968 to be in office. Clinton took about 44 percent to Bush's 39 percent and Perot's 17 percent of the vote. Other candidates and future election returns may vary those numbers slightly. Bush conceded the race around 11 p.m. Tuesday night.

Eight out of 10 voters characterized the economy as poor. 43 percent considered jobs the most important issue. 22 percent cited the deficit and 21 percent health care as their primary concern.

Term limit ballot proposals passed in Arizona, Arkansas, California, Florida, Michigan, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, North Dakota, Ohio, Oregon, South Dakota, Washington and Wyoming. 81 percent favored the measure in Wyoming to only 58 percent in Michigan.

Measures to limit gay rights showed no consensus across the nation. Colorado passed a measure rescinding gay rights and Oregon upheld rights for gays. Violence was expected in Portland, Oregon.

Despite representing 51 percent of the population, women were only three senators of 100. Now they have six. California now has two women senators, a first for the U.S. Carol Moseby Brown of Illinois also won, becoming the first black woman to win a Senate seat.

LOCAL

Bill Clinton is the first Democrat to take New Jersey in a Presidential campaign since 1964, when Lyndon Baines Johnson did.

All four ballot questions in New Jersey passed. The Green Acres ballot question will allow for the sale of $345 million in bonds to purchase land, grants and several other projects. Another question would expand the death penalty to include crimes when a victim is killed even if it was not the perpetrator's intent. The state will also assume the cost of the County Courts. The last ballot question will effectively give the power of the line item veto to the State Legislature. The Constitutionality of this particular measure will probably be challenged.

Senator Al D'Amato of New York won another term in the United States Senate. In a tight race with Robert Abrams he squeaked by with a 51 percent-49 percent margin. This was said to be the nastiest race in the nation this year and in New York's history.

A four-year-old girl from Poplar, Mont. got a rare 5 organ transplant. She received a new liver, stomach, pancreas, large intestine and small intestine in a Pittsburgh hospital. She is in critical condition. This transplant was necessary because she was born with Short Gut Syndrome, which prevents the small intestine from absorbing nutrients.

In New Jersey all ten incumbents running for Congress won by large margins.

First woman President of ACLU speaks on the impact of losing Roe v. Wade

by Doreen Garrahan

"Roe v. Wade is now hanging by a thread," Nadine Strossen, president of the American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU), said Wednesday at a press conference in Life Hall, preceding a lecture in Memorial Auditorium at 8 p.m..

Asked by President Irvin Reid to speak about Roe v. Wade and its impact on American society, Strossen, 42, born in Jersey City and the first female president in the ACLU's history, felt it was more important to speak about what impact losing Roe v. Wade will have on society. "The United States Supreme Court is hostile to human rights," Strossen said. If one Supreme Court member changes, if President Bush gets his member appointed, Roe v. Wade will be overturned, said Strossen. She believes that even pro-life advocates would pause if they saw the rippling effects an overturn would make.

"ACLU protects all rights for all people. It is impossible to take away one right from one person, without endangering all rights of all people," Strossen said.

Nadine Strossen president of the ACLU

Strossen's lecture was part of Montclair State's Presidential Lecture series, and sponsored by the Alumni Association, with additional funding by the Faculty Student Cooperative Association. "Civil liberties have taken a back seat to economics," Strossen said. There has been little discussion of human rights in general in this election. Abortion was not really addressed in the presidential debates and was only touched upon briefly in the vice presidential debate. Strossen feels abortion is a critically important issue. She wants everyone to understand their rights. She said she would have accepted the speaking engagement regardless of the election. She accepts all university engagements because she wants to reach out to younger generations. She wants them to understand their rights.

Strossen graduated Harvard Law School, magna cum laude, in 1975. She has taught at Columbia and New York University Law schools. Strossen has served the ACLU as a board member since 1983, and as a general council member since 1986. She was elected president in January 1991.

ACLU's agenda is to defend all rights of all people. They've been known to defend such people as Oliver North and Pat Buchanan. They were recently involved in Morristown, defending the rights of homeless people to use public libraries. They won the case only to have it overturned by the Supreme Court. ACLU does not charge a fee to defend. They have offices in all 50 states.

Campus to update 893 exchange

by Mike Cappadona

The 893 campus phone line will be changed due the construction of new buildings on campus, said M. Lynn Truesdell, assistant vice president of information services.

Truesdell said he hopes the new line can be installed before the new academic building opens next September. "The transition will be made much easier if it is done prior to that opening," he said.

Presently, the phone line is fed out of New Jersey Bell in Nutley. Due to the construction, the campus has outgrown that company because of the need for more extensions, said Edward Buscavage, assistant director of information services. The campus would be moving over to a Montclair switch.

The college will be saving some money because of the locality of the Montclair switch. The quality of the phone lines will also improve. Right now, the line used is made of copper cable. The new lines will be fiber optics, which is a much better quality, Buscavage said.

Drop-In Center starting new training program

by Doreen Garrahan

The Drop-In Center, a peer counseling, information and referral service on campus, is launching a new training program this semester. They started Nov. 2, having students who are interested in doing volunteer peer counseling drop in, fill out an application and be interviewed on the spot. Those interviewed can come in today, Nov. 5 from 5 p.m. - 10 p.m.; Friday, Nov. 6, 3 p.m. - 5 p.m.; or Saturday, Nov. 7, 10 a.m. - 1 p.m. Interviews are being held until Nov. 15.

In the past, the Drop-In Center only held training once in the beginning of each semester. With this new program, they hope to train three times a year. The Acting Director, Lori Dini, said the training program will consist of a series of mandatory workshops to introduce interested applicants to the Drop-In Center's style of counseling. The workshops will be followed by a series of roleplaying, in which simulated counseling situations will be created. Dini said, "The staff hopes the new training process will be less intense than previous training procedures, and will result in more students applying."

This semester the Drop-In Center has not been able to provide 24 hour, seven-day-a-week service, due to the small staff size. They will be open from 9 a.m. - 7 p.m. Friday, 9 a.m. - 12 p.m. Saturday, and 4 p.m. - 10 p.m. Sunday. They hope to resume 24 hour, seven-days-a-week operation once more students join the staff.

LASO celebrates 500 years of Latin history and pride during Latin Month, November '92

by Belinda Diaz

Experience it: 500 years of Latin pride. This is the theme of Latin Month, 1992, which officially commenced last Sunday with a Latin Flag Raising Ceremony followed by an Opening Banquet in the Student Center Formal Dining Room.

People who attended the banquet were addressed by President Irvin Reid, as well as deeply moving speeches by Dr. Luis Montesinos and Dr. Sandra, both of the psychology department.

Montesinos chose to address the Columbus controversy, stressing that when Latinos look back on their culture, they should not forget the Indian heritage that was there before.

Sandra was asked to speak about the African experience in Latin America. She gave a moving account of how, while researching the topic, her pride was severely wounded. She said she discovered that the African people had been treated cruelly by Latinos. She ended with an optimistic gesture. Sandra had everyone in the room stand and state they were all part of the future—that they should look at 500 years to come, rather than look back.

The banquet was coordinated by Olga Montero, who is also Latin Month Coordinator this year. Montero has been a member since 1991. "I was very pleased with the attendance at the Opening Banquet and I hope it will continue through the course of the month. Our main purpose is to serve the campus community and that is why we have coordinated all these events. Take the opportunity to learn about 500 years of cultural heritage," said Montero.

The Latin American Student Organization (LASO) was founded in 1970 by approximately 25 students in conjunction with Carlos Ortiz, assistant dean of humanities and social sciences. He has been the advisor since the beginning.

In 1975, LASO received its current Class One status. At that time, LASO's prime concerns were to enhance the awareness of Hispanics on campus, as well as to help high school student get into college. Today, those concerns remain the same. However, LASO's current President, Sandra Garcia said they have broadened those ideas. "We've expanded LASO's original objectives by educating the campus about issues that concern Latinos today. We are trying to use LASO as the strong voice to express the needs of the Latino students," said Garcia.

LASO's members range from Caribbean backgrounds to Latin American backgrounds, as well as European and African descents. All are welcome to join and definitely encouraged to participate in this month's coming events. There will be food, music, dancing, lectures, art exhibits and a lot of friendly faces ready to welcome you, whoever you are and wherever you're from.

ministration didn't want to get involved and did whatever would make things easiest for them (the administration)."

Fanelli also said that while he was at Police headquarters, Martin telephoned Sgt. Debra Newcombe. Fanelli said he overheard Newcombe ask Martin if he wanted to speak with him, and assumed since he was not given the phone that Martin said no. Newcombe said that she did not speak with Dean Martin that day.

Martin said that he made the decision to ban Fanelli and not Maffia because Fanelli does not live on campus. He said that when you need to keep two students apart, banning "the off campus student is the more logical choice." Martin said, "I don't believe we've done anything to deny him his right to an education."

Dr. Desiderioscioli met with Fanelli's mother. She said she "provided administrative support by meeting with him and his mother and does not agree with his perception."

Betty Fanelli said she spoke with Desiderioscioli, who offered the Fanelli's money back on Marc's meal plan. Mrs. Fanelli felt that Marc's rights were being violated. "I find it appalling that the administration found Marc guilty before a court did," said Mrs. Fanelli.

The Fanelli's hired a lawyer, who sent the Associate Director of Residence Life a letter, stating that Fanelli's rights were taken away without "benefit of any investigation, any formal hearing or any of the usual due process rights that Marc is entitled to as a citizen and a student of Montclair State. Stripping him of his right to come and go on the campus, visit friends, use the facilities for which he has paid a tuition is an unconscionable violation of his rights as a citizen and student of Montclair State." The letter was sent Oct. 14. Fanelli's privileges were reinstated Oct. 19.

Mrs. Fanelli spoke with Martin and said she was bothered when Martin told her, "sometimes we have to restrict peoples civil rights for the safety of all, for instance its your right to cross the street if the light's green, but you wouldn't do it if a truck was coming."

The case is scheduled to go to trial in Little Falls court on Nov. 18. Martin said that once a verdict is reached it is very possible that the administration will become involved. If a student is found guilty on assault charges administrative action, possibly including suspension may take place.

Court date postponed for alleged masturbator

by Jean Paternoster

A court appearance has been rescheduled to Dec. 2, for a Montclair man charged with lewdness in the parking lot of the Clove Road apartments on Sept. 27, said the Little Falls Municipal Court Clerk.

Michael A. Primamore, 24, of Valley Road, was scheduled to appear before municipal court judge John Gavenda on Oct. 28, but was granted an adjournment when he entered a plea of "not guilty."

The complainant, a 21-year-old MSC senior psychology major, told Campus Police that as she was entering her car at 9:10 p.m., on Sept. 27, by the 200 section of Clove Road apartments, Primamore drove up to her and asked for directions to Bloomfield Avenue. As the woman was giving the directions, she noticed that he was masturbating.

A second female, who was approached by Primamore seconds later, also reported the incident to Campus Police, but did not file a complaint.

Study says women get $.40 less than men for same job

by Adriana Gale

Glamour magazine published an article in their October, 1992, issue which displayed a huge disparity in salary earnings between men and women in today's workplace.

The article said that in 1992, the average starting salary for female college graduates was $23-$24,000. The alarming news was that the average starting salary for male college graduates in 1992 was $33-$34,000. The article compared all salaries between men and women who have the same educational level. A female high school graduate, in 1992, earns approximately $14-$15,000.

A male high school graduate earns approximately ten thousand dollars more than his female classmate.

According to Glamour's study, women earn roughly sixty cents for every one dollar a man earns even though women make up 51.7 percent of the U.S. population.

If anyone feels that this is discrimination and that women are being treated as second class citizens please bring this issue to the attention of your local politician. If you would like to write to Senator Bill Bradley, the address is:

Campus Police Report

Edited by Kelly J. Schab

Follow-up Investigation

10/29/92: Montclair PD investigated a number of recent car burglaries and arrested a juvenile and a former MSC student for being in possession of the stolen property. The thefts occurred on 10/16/92. One of the car stereos recovered belonged to an MSC student. Records reflect 5 cars had been vandalized but no stereos reported stolen. Further investigation led to a student from Bohn Hall as the victim. He said he had not had the time to report the theft from his car but had intended to. Further charges are pending in this matter.

Theft

Aggravated Assault

10/30/92: Students from Blanton and Stone Hall had gotten into a fist fight during the course of an argument. The argument was over the dating of a Blanton student. One was injured and taken to the Health Center then Mountainside Hospital. Criminal charges pending.

11/2/92: A male MSC student of Clove Road reported that he had been waiting for a female student after class in the library. While he was waiting two males kept walking in and out of the library and seemed nervous or angry. He did not know them. When the female student came out of class she looked upset upon seeing the two males. One of the males was from William Paterson College and confronted the MSC male about dating her and how he had been told to stay away from her. The WPC student then slapped the MSC student's face and started poking him in the shoulder. The WPC student then punched the MSC student in the face and a fight ensued. The fight was broken up by some passers-by. One left during the fight. The WPC student continued to threaten the MSC student, threw his keys and kicked his books before leaving. The MSC student was taken to the Health Center and Mountainside Hospital. Criminal charges are pending.

ported that the OSAU office had received inquiries about a female student from an unidentified male caller with an accent. While an officer was taking the report, another call was received and the officer spoke with the suspect. The suspect stated that he did not want to talk with the police, refused to identify himself, and hung up. No further calls were received.

Harassment

11/2/92: A Freeman Hall resident reported that she had received numerous abusive phone calls from an unidentified female caller. There are no suspects at this time.

Disorderly Conduct

11/3/92: A student from Freeman Hall and a friend wanted to be allowed entrance into Lot 4 with their vehicle. While the security officer at dispatch attempted to explain the policy for entrance into the lot, a female in the car exited the vehicle, came into Police Headquarters and began arguing and cursing at the officer. When the sergeant in charge attempted to calm her down by explaining the policy, she continued to be disorderly and threatening. She told the sergeant that she was sick and tired of the policy on campus and walked out. She re-entered headquarters and began yelling. She finally left.

Alpha Kappa Psi visits boy's home in Denville

by Cindy Bauman

The Brothers of Alpha Kappa Psi and their perspective members visited St. Peter's Boy's Home in Denville on Sunday, November 1. For just a couple of hours they forgot about school, exams, classes and jobs as these wonderful kids brightened their day. The kids' good spirit and high energy level was contagious and soon after the group's arrival, they were all feeling the same amount of excitement. Some of the members played games with them such as football and basketball, while others just had fun by talking and getting to know them. Visiting these boys is something that the brothers of AKP do quite often, but for their perspective members, this first experience was one that they'll never forget.

CAMPUS LIFE

A closer look at Aldan Dining Service

by George Olschewski

If you think sports teams in New York play in front of rough crowds, you should see what MSC's dining service goes through. Last year, Wood Food Service was crucified by the student body and the SGA in the form of surveys, scathing editorials in The Montclarion, and chants of "No More Wood!" Aldan Dining Services has replaced Wood, and not more than a week had passed when the call went out that Aldan was no better than Wood.

Fortunately for Aldan, these are few. Many changes have taken place since Aldan started dishing out the food. They pumped $125,000 into changes and renovations to the Student Center Cafe, Blanton and College Hall. New concessions have been opened, new entrees are on the way, and the Rat has a new soup-to-nuts menu. So why do some students have bad vibes about Aldan?

"I'd have to attribute that to distractive headlines in The Montclarion," said Gerald Frungillo, head of Aldan Dining Services at MSC. "Most of the articles have been pretty fair, but this article [Appetite Cotter's column "Spend lots of money. Eat mediocre food. Go Barf. in the September 17, 1992 issue of The Montclarion] has a very distracting headline."

All right. Like the Janet Jackson song says, "What have you done for me lately?"

Chinese food stand, a bakery case, and revamped the sandwich stand. Aldan is working extensively with ping us apart, saying that this was wrong and that was wrong. One person even said that MSC should get Wood back. Then they introduced me. I said, 'Hi, my name's Gerry and I'm the head of Aldan Dining Services,' and I went into just what was going on and why things were the way they were. After I was done, people were saying that we weren't that bad and at least we listened to what they [the students] said. Wood never did that."

One of the major complaints was the quality of the pizza. The general consensus is that it's okay, but having it cold and then thrown into a "warming oven" to heat up is unappetizing. This stems from

Quite a few changes have come about since Wood was given the boot. Aldan has added a

Panel Discussion on the presidential elections

by Maria da Silva and Ivet Bandirma

The Kopps Lounge was filled with eager students on Wednesday night, October 28, waiting to hear the responses of four local political figures to questions concerning this year's presidential elections.

The panel discussion, co-sponsored by the Latin American Student Organization (LASO) and Sigma Psi Phi sorority, gave students the opportunity to voice their opinions in an effort to demonstrate concerns about the future of the nation, particularly the future of the minority population as a whole.

The guests included Marty Barnes, president of the City Council of Paterson, Maria Magda, the first Councilwoman elected in Paterson, Eli Burgos, city purchaser of Paterson and Henry Quintero, a representative of Hispanic Outreach.

The event was mediated by Sigma Psi Phi Sorority sister Evelyn Osorio and LASO President Sandra Garcia. The questions asked ranged from personal views of politics today to choices of importance of maintaining higher educational standards in order to bring about changes in society. They also stressed the tremendous influence that minorities could have on the decisions made in government if they remained united.

The evening ended with questions from audience members that were mainly geared toward the personal opinions of the politicians. Both the students and guest speakers were given the chance to exchange views about issues that are of importance to the entire public.

Coming to you bi-weekly By Appetite Cotter

A pink and blue Rat. Fluorescent lights. Kill me now.

Alright guys, look, the elections are over. Do you dig? OVER. Let's get on the same groove-a-tron here so we don't have any problems: OVER, OVER, OVER! If your muppet lost or won, weep, vomit, get naked and do a lot of drugs, it doesn't matter all that much in the grand scheme of the universe. The next person who has the distinct honor of farting in the Lincoln Room of the White House isn't you or me, so we're out of the loop, so to speak...

There's something distinctly more profound waiting for us on the horizon, my fellow urchins, something that has a direct effect on our existence. Grab a sorority sister and use the bathroom before you leave because...gasp... THE RAT IS POISED ON THE BRINK OF ITS GRAND AND GLORIOUS REOPENING! Joy and rapture.

What? That's it? That's the big F-ing deal? Like whoopee-do Miffy. Let's go to the Delta mixer and bond...

OK, OK, I dig. I mean I know what you're saying. But I've seen you man, after plunking down 75 cents on that can of Dr. Pepper downstairs in the Student Center. Yep, your eyes wander from the glowing bulge of the machine and you pretend to be reading the front cover of a week old Village Voice. But nooo, you're yearning, nearly flipping out inside to smash your nose up against the cold plate glass so your beady eyes can dart back and forth, sucking up as much information as possible about the brilliant pink and blue fluorescent bulbed grand ol' eating hole we used to call home. Your optical nerves strain to find the once dark poop brown hue that once dominated the dank and foreboding space.

You feel your body tense up and contract. Your nose has begun to fall asleep from the pressure of being jammed against the window for far too long and the hot steam of your tortured breathing has turned the glass into a virtual shower stall of drool and tongue juice.

"I CAN'T BELIEVE IT!"

you scream, "They've turned the Rat into the Towers Diner!!!! It's so, so BLUE!!!"

It is at this point that you break. You cannot bear the thought of the Rat being transformed into a cheesy art deco rumpus room. You begin to slap your forehead against the window in a fury of blood and mucus...

"JESUS H. TAPDANCING CHRIST! THIS IS THE END OF WESTERN CIVILIZATION!"

HIDE YOUR CHILDREN! GET THE COWS INTO THE BARN! GET ME AN ADVIL, NOW!!!"

Your face penetrates the glass, throwing your wiggling mass onto the smooth pastel tiles below. Now, red, being a primary color, distinctly clashes with general atmosphere and decor of the newly refurbished room. And because a lot of red is coming out of various openings of your body, there is a general uneasiness amongst the construction workers that have gathered around your quivering body.

"Joe. JOE! Come look at this. We got some kid over here unloading bodily fluids on the tiles Chester laid this afternoon..."

"Oh fer Christ sakes! He's staining the whole friggin' floor. Bob, get me a friggin' mop would ya' please? Jeez-sus!"

Twiching and gurgling, you are hoisted up by your shoulders and placed on a drop cloth on the brandy-new handicapable ramp, strategically located near your closest escape route. You can faintly hear mumbling somewhere in the corner of the room, the contents of which slowly bring your being back into this plane of reality...

"Psst! Joe! Look man, I checked the dumpster. Its pretty much full as is. And food service said human flesh is definitely not recyclable."

"Well, geez, I don't have the slightest clue as to what the hell we're going to do with him..."

With the last ounce of strength in your muscles, you pull yourself erect, and with piercing cold eyes, begin to speak. "You, you.... bastards... How could you? I..I mean...PINK AND BLUE TILE?!? PINK AND BLUE TILE?!? And fluorescent lights? What are you guys THINKING?!?"

With that, your eyes roll back into your skull and you fall into oblivion. When you come out of your coma 20 years later, they've converted the Rat into an administrative lounge, complete with a stocked bar and velvet on the walls. Life is good. Eat at Rocky's.

the fact that the Rat isn't open. "The only pizza ovens we have in the Student Center are in the Rat, and until the Rat opens, we can't use them," Frungillo explained. "We make the pizzas in Blanton Hall and send them into the Student Center, and we warm them up as we need them. They're sent over pretty regularly."

The next problem is the lack of trays. Aldan has temporarily substituted cardboard trays until new plastic ones arrive. However, if students keep swiping the trays, there won't be any left, and then prices of the food will have to go up to cover the cost of new trays. "I've ordered some 60 dozen new trays, but they cost money," Frungillo said. Fraternities and sororities take them for pledges, people throw them out, it all will eventually translate into escalating cost, which Aldan doesn't need to bare.

"When we bid for MSC's contract, the administration asked us what our purpose here is. I told them it was to make the students, faculty, and the administration-our customers- happy. They said, 'Oh, and to make a profit, too, right?' I said that if we make a profit while we do it, then that's great, but if our customers aren't happy with the food, then we won't be here very long," Frungillo said.

Frungillo has an open-door policy when it comes to the food service. If a student or faculty has a complaint about the food or the service, let him know. "I can't fix it unless I know what's broken. If someone comes up to me and says 'This stinks that doesn't do me any good. What's bad about it? Tell me, and I'll try to correct it.'"

The long checkout lines are also a problem, but that will be solved as soon as the Rat opens up. Food that isn't available in the Student Center cafeteria will be in the Rat, such as whole pizzas, stromboli, calzones, mozzarella sticks, potato skins, four sizes of Buffalo wings, meatball sandwiches, chicken cutlet parmesan, eggplant parmesan, and antipasto. Also, Frungillo would like to see more students go into the faculty cafeteria next to the Ballrooms. "Students don't know they can go in there, but they can, and they can also get a 10 percent discount on the dinners there, and they're exempt from the sales tax." Dinners offered range from soup and half a sandwich ($2.75) to broiled filet of sole (scampi, provencale, or oreganato, $3.75).

"We're really pushing for more campus participation," Frungillo said. "We have more holiday specials planned. We just got done with Octoberfest, and we're planning events for Christmas and Thanksgiving. Residence Life loves what we're doing."

Alcohol in the Rat is always a sensitive subject, but if MSC's administration okays it, alcohol will return. "We'll comply to the best of our ability with whatever the school and the students agree upon," Frungillo said. "If they say okay, then we'll do it. If they say no, then we won't."

More specials are planned to get more students into the dining experience. Aldan had a special where students signing up for Free-Flow Plus for the first time got $25 in free food coupons when they deposited $25 into their Free-Flow Plus account. It was only a one shot deal, but it went over well. "We gave out a lot of free food in September, and we'll be offering it again in January," Frungillo said.

"We want to give people what they want," Frungillo said. "We planning a 'Treat Your Body Right' entree, where you can get a healthy, nutritious meal. We're willing to give just about anything a try. Our only limitations are the budget and what we can fit in the cafeterias."

Is Aldan that bad? Well, their rice in the Chinese food stand tastes too chloriney, their soy sauce is too salty, and one or two of the workers at the pizza and grill stations are a bit grumpy at times. But Aldan assures me that they're working on it. They can't fix it unless they know what's broken. If you think something's broken, tell them.

Give 'em a chance.

The 1992 presidential election has come and gone and for the most part the battle over women's right to obtain an abortion was not a major issue. Bill Clinton represented the pro-choice contingency while George Bush continued to pander to right-wing thinking that women should be denied the right to control their own bodies.

At one time, George Bush actually used to argue for a woman's right to choose. When he became Ronald Reagan's Vice Presidential candidate in 1980 he suddenly changed his position on choice and in the course of his eight years in office became a leading pro-life supporter. President Bush approved a Republican platform that would outlaw all abortions, even those that are the result of rape and incest.

Over the past 12 years the Republicans have done a great deal to stonewall the efforts of women and men who support women's right to choose established by the 1972 Supreme Court case, Roe v. Wade. "Roe v. Wade is now hanging by a thread," said Nadine Strossen, president of the American Civil Liberties Union, at a press conference held at MSC last Wednesday. Strossen stressed that women's rights are human's rights; therefore, all citizens should be concerned about the damage that could be done to the civil liberties of more than half the country's population if Roe v. Wade were to be overturned.

As students it is our future that the government dictates through congressional legislation and Supreme Court decisions. If the government can take a very important liberty, the ability to determine what can and cannot be done to one's own body, from one group of American's, what is to stop it from further infringing on our rights in other areas? Whether we agree, which we certainly never will on the moral issues surrounding abortion, it is our obligation as citizens to respect one another's rights just as we expect the government to respect our rights.

President-Elect Clinton has pledged to make securing women's right to choose a major goal during his term as president. His job will be a difficult one as he faces an extremely conservative Reagan/Bush created Supreme Court which has the final say in the ongoing battle between pro-choice supporters and pro-life supporters. Nevertheless, as president he possesses the power to create a new awareness in this country that respects women's rights and human rights.

As Roe v. Wade dangles by that ever-fraying thread for the duration of the Bush era we must believe that Clinton will live up to his promises to create policies that will bring civil liberties into the forefront of American society once again. "It is impossible to take away one right from one person, without endangering all rights of all people," said Strossen. It certainly gives us something to think about while we wait patiently for the 1996 Presidential Election Campaigns to begin.

COMMENTARY

Weimar Republic rises in America

Debate me on what on I say not on what you think I said. Before I start my column I would like to say that the picture of George Bush as Satan under my "Christian values" column was ill-conceived and not my idea. In the column I spoke of not judging others and the picture made me appear hypocritical. As if enough of you don't think that already. I don't know if George Bush tries to follow Christ, I hope he does, but the results of his policies seem to not represent what I have come to know as Christian.

A few women, no men yet, have written back in reply to column. One accused me of saying that men are not responsible for their own sexuality. Another merely mentioned my name in an article that discussed the physical ails and dangers of pregnancy, never after that, to attack a point that I made or even mentioned my name. These people are part of the problem that we have in this country. The fascist mentality.

I categorically state that all men and women are responsible for their sexuality. It is not my intention to blame the single-minded attitude of many men towards sex or women. It is also not my intention to blame men for women who choose to parade themselves around to make money in commercials, television, and movies. I am simply trying to state that we are not animals, but it is a great deal harder to control your hormones when we are constantly faced with Venus and Adonis look-alikes.

The women who wrote back to me only read what I said. They found particularly offensive statements against their beliefs and based the context around them to suit their opinions. They did not attack one legal or moral principle that I set forth. The same thing happened last year. This is a clear cut warning sign of what is evolving in our nation.

Unfortunately, people no longer debate the issues. Most people form reactionary opinions based on emotion, not fact and reality. We have a very dangerous climate developing in this country.

People stand around George Bush crying, "Four more years!", "We love you!", "Where was Bill?", "White House, not a whorehouse!", and "America No.1!". What is this a football game? These are people blindly following a leader.

Worse yet, we have had Ross Perot running for president of the United States. Does anyone know what he really stood for? As a person, he may be a nice guy, but did anyone notice that his political rise resembles Hitler's rise from the ashes of Weimar Republic? The only thing that we truly know about Perot was that he was not our own safety, and push a strong nationalist sentiment. America is just a piece of land, not an idol we should pay homage to.

The press was involved in this debacle too. They recant non-issues and play down decisive events. They barely cried out when they were censored during the Persian Gulf War. They ignore candidates unless they are Democrats, Republicans, or have $2 billion. I do not like the Libertarian Party, but about one in 25 people was registered with this group. Andre Marreau was their presidential candidate, but he couldn't buy television time, no less get invited to the debates. His party wanted to completely phase out the taxes we have on us, but they too are sadly capitalists.

There was no choice in this election. I voted to get Bush out of office, not to get anyone else in. We had no viable opposition to this dog-eat-dog capitalist system and sadly enough most of the world is following us down the gutter. Beware.

At least you have two sets

Lately I find it very difficult to write. Once again I find the women I had hoped to share my life with and myself ensconced in an incommunicado state. Yes, said state is a sad state for me. Trying to escape from the self imposed shell I am in, I went to the seashore to study. Although I did not outrun my fears I did find a symmetrically salacious spiral conch, as well as some solace.

I am listening to the Bodeans (Do you remember the Bodeans? The band that adopted the Beverly Hillbillies stalwart Jethro's last name as their own) 1987 LP Outside Looking In specifically "Don't Be Lonely" as I write this sentence, I find it ironic on two counts: First, regardless of the song's advice I am lonely thinking about you. You know if I had the ability to pick where I lived I would choose to inhabit a 60's love song. Where love made the world go round and was really all you need. And I would share it with you. I chose the sixties mainly because J. Geils did not promulgate the stinky side of love until the early 80's.

Secondly, and important enough to rate a brandy new paragraph, I ventured over to the Student Government Office the other evening to procure some student government advice and a postage stamp. Much to my dismay after being assessed a minimum of $120.00 in student government fees, I found myself outside looking in, the office was closed. How could the Student Government Office be closed at six o'clock in the evening you might ask. Actually you should ask, particularly if you were a night student whose earliest class started at five o'clock. The unsettling and equally unacceptable answer would be because the Student Government Association has the unmitigated gall to deny night students any pretense of service. By offering open office hours from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., the Student Government Association effectively disfranchised the entire night student body. Double this disenfranchisement for weekend students who can't even arrive early to class to take advantage of student government services even though they pay the same fees. Sort of stinky, huh? Yes, disfranchised is the archaic form of the more modern disenfranchised, the meaning remains synonymously the same. You're right, I am filling space.

That disenfranchised soliloquy is simply fodder. Remember, I have been experiencing writers block lately, I do not harbor any overt pedantic ambitions.

Remember when I spoke of symmetry in the first paragraph? An equally impressive symmetrical sight adorns the west side of the campus commons. Ostensibly symbolic of the Statue of Liberty, an arm and a leg edifice has risen outside the fine arts building. Congratulations are due the artist that created the symbolic masterpiece. Clearly it costs an arm and a leg to attend MSC a sad fact so succinctly captured by the aforesaid sculpture.

LETTER...

So, go shave your head...

In response to Trish Barker's commentary on Sinead O'Connor, I would like to say phooey!

I, as well as a million other intelligent people love Sinead's music. Anyway, what's so funny about peace, love and understanding? I happen to think being socially aware is a positive thing. I also think that people don't spend enough energy getting a rise out of other people.

Since when has freedom of speech been revoked? I thought this country was big enough for many different opinions on religion. It's called democracy.

Now, about the Pope thing. How can you be so sure the S.N.L. incident was pointless?

Sinead O'Connor says that she believes in God, but not in the church. And, frankly, organized religion doesn't have a good track record. Remember the Spanish Inquisition? The Crusades? You know, when all those hundreds of peons were murdered in the name of religion.

Look, the Catholic church has never been for the people, it's been for greedy, powerful, white men. Hey, I enjoy knowing the Pope wears a dress and lives in a mansion. Meanwhile, miles away, people are starving. So, Sinead said nope to the Pope. Sinead herself said that her country is being torn apart by religion. Furthermore, she grew up in an abusive home with a mother who was fanatical about the church. Sinead was sent away to a catholic girls school where there was more negative catholic upbringing. So to her the Pope represents all that is unjust in this world.

While it's true that some symbols (Pope, flag, etc.) mean a lot to some people, it's also true that we have the right to dismember those symbols.

So, Trish and anyone else who sees no point in speaking out about issues that concern the population, I say again phooey!

Life's all about taking a stand and saying what's on your mind. What sort of a world would this be if everyone just kept silent? Not a good one.

Rosenbaum and King, there is no comparison

I'm Right! By Matt Swartz

Before I get into women's rights, I want to thank all my new friends from the debate in the Student Center Quad who cheered me on during my earth moving speech and for supported me when I was challenged by a group of liberals and representatives of certain campus organizations! As I demonstrated, I was capable of dealing with their false statements and threats. Even though they outnumbered and surrounded me, I still came out on top, because I'M RIGHT!

My friend Steve told me that Jews do evil things and they get special treatment under the law while black Americans are mistreated under the law. Well Steve, what do you have to say about the verdict which acquitted Lemrick Nelson, the accused murderer of Yankel Rosenbaum, in Crown Heights by a jury made up of mostly minorities? The facts: after a terrible accident which a Jewish driver accidentally killed a seven year old black boy, angry citizens roamed the streets yelling, "Kill the Jews," "Six million more," and "Hitler was right." They also threw rocks at Jews, attacked Jews, and looted Jewish stores. Sounds like Nazi Germany but it was Crown Heights.

Before I go on, I want to say that not all blacks in Crown Heights did this. I believe the majority of black citizens were disgusted with what happened in Crown Heights and realized what a hateful, bias crime happened to this young Jewish boy!

Anyway, back to this horrible story, certain gangs of these hateful people in Crown Heights decided to get even, and the first Jew they saw they decided to murder! Rosenbaum wasn't involved in the accident, his only crime was being a Jew! As soon as they saw the Jew, they attacked him and savagely murdered him. Before he died, the police found Lemrick Nelson with Rosenbaum's blood on his clothes, on his money, and on his knife which was used stab poor Rosenbaum. Rosenbaum then pointed him out as one of the dozen-plus attackers and asked him "why he did this?" Nelson also confessed off tape that he did this animalistic crime!

Only Senator Alfonse D'Amato went to visit the Jewish community and offer his sincere regrets and promised to get justice for this racially biased crime. Mayor Dinkins tried to stop further violence but did nothing for the Jewish community. He didn't even offer a reward for the capture of the people who murdered Rosenbaum until 14 months later! Now a mostly minority jury decided that Jew blood isn't enough reason to send one of their own to jail. Fellow Jews are angry and protested in the streets. No rioting, no looting, no murdering, no attacking black Americans, just a mostly peaceful protest, not like in Los Angeles!

One of my black friends said, "Now you know how we feel after the Rodney King incident!" I then explained to him that Rodney King is alive to attempt to get justice and compensation for the alleged police brutality charge. He has also been arrested at least twice since the trial (beating his wife, and I believe an alcohol related crime). Rosenbaum is just another murdered Jew who will never get his justice in this world, so don't you dare compare Rodney King to Rosenbaum!

viet Union, and many others. Attacks on Jews and our property is up 50 percent this year on campuses all over the U.S.!

Istvan Csurka, 58, a journalist and member of the Hungary Parliament, declared that the Jews are responsible for all of Hungary's post-war ills as he stated in one of the national magazines of Hungary, Magyar Forum. In Bonn, Germany, vandals desecrated and damaged by arson a Jewish cemetery. Swastikas were marked on a memorial and 50 smashed Jewish gravestones exist in Uberlingen, Germany. Other anti-semitic actions have been happening all over Germany and the world. You heard it here first, uniting Germany was the biggest mistake in

I believe the majority of black citizens were disgusted with what happened in Crown Heights and realized what a hateful, bias crime happened to this young Jewish boy!

You may think I'm crazy, but I'm not. I'm just scared for all the Jews around the world because we're being murdered just because we're Jews. Not just by blacks, but by Arabs, Muslims, Eastern Europeans, former members of the So-recent history! The Nazis aren't dead yet! The point of this week's column is to show and warn you all of the hate against Jews in this world and to ask you to help in fighting this problem. All hate must be fought before it's too late!

U.S. should rethink aid to Israel

To the Editor of The Montclarion:

Everyone in the U.S. has felt the severe impact this prolonged recession has had on the fundamental elements of the American society: the educational system, the health system, and the economic infrastructure among others. At a time when students in this country are suffering from the ever decreasing financial aid and other budget cuts in the schools and universities, we should all question the wisdom of supporting Israel's occupation of Palestinian lands and the savage repression of all Palestinian rights, even their sacred right to education.

The U.S. has provided over $50 billion in economic and military aid to Israel since 1949, more than to any other country in the world. The U.S. aid to Israel in 1989 alone totaled $3,742,100,000.00. In addition, Israel receives approximately $2.5 billion in private tax-exempt funds from American citizens. This means that the U.S. pays each Israeli citizen $1,377.00 annually! This is in spite of the fact that Israel has the highest GNP per capita among all recipients of U.S. foreign assistance. Just for the sake of comparison, the average annual U.S. aid to Africa is a mere 93 cents per capita.

Many of us would support reasonable humanitarian aid to help other countries cope with natural disasters or to further their economic development programs. However, can U.S. aid to Israel be remotely considered 'humanitarian'? A close examination of how this aid is channeled reveals how American tax payers' money is supporting Israeli occupation, oppression and dehumanization of Palestinians. Israel has occupied the West Bank and Gaza since 1967. The entire world community, including the U.S. oppose this occupation and consider it illegal. Israel has been cited numerous times by Amnesty International and the United Nations' reports as violating international law, the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and U.N. Security Council resolutions. These violations include confiscation of Palestinian lands, extra-judicial killing of Palestinian activists, long closures of Palestinian schools and universities, building illegal settlements, and collective punishment of entire communities. The latest, highly publicized inhumane treatment of political prisoners is yet another example of the illegal and immoral practices of the Israeli occupation. Without the American taxpayers' money, Israel could not maintain this military occupation.

Furthermore, Israel has violated U.S. Foreign Assistance Act not only by violating Palestinian human rights but also by transferring sensitive American military technology to South Africa (Which uses it in its nuclear weapons' development program) and by providing training and funding to death squads in Latin America.

The obvious question that arises is how can such irrational and immoral aid continue? Although there is no simple answer to this profound question, one dimension of the answer is crystal clear: the pro-Israel Political Action Committees paid close to $4.9 billion in contributions to members of the U.S. Senate between 1983 and 1988.

American students can make a difference by demanding that their representatives to Congress cut the aid to Israel and spend their tax money on education, housing and health, not illegal occupation and oppression abroad.

It's LASO Fun!

As students, as well as representatives of the Latin community, we have seen a growing apathy among the Latin students. This concern includes the lack of involvement from Latinos not only on our campus, but also involvement within the Latin community. Because of this neglect, we have seen many Latin students deprived of opportunities available to them because they don't know where to find information. So where do you go to find out what's available to you? One solution: get involved!

One of many organizations that you can join is the Latin American Student Organization (LASO). The members of LASO have always prided ourselves on what the organization has to offer to the campus community as well as to its own members; thus our motto "In unity there is strength." LASO has helped many students over the years, both Latino and non-Latino alike, through its events, its vast information given out at general membership meetings, and even through its leadership.

LASO has had two major events, a dance featuring the New York Band and Triple Threat, both of which were very successful. LASO even placed eleventh in the homecoming parade, a great showing considering the small turnout of supporters. Although these events have turned out well, the members of LASO's executive committee are extremely disappointed with the lack of participation from our student body and as Latin Month approaches, there are some concerns with poor attendance at these events.

LASO invites you to join us for Latin Month and ask you to "Experience our Latin Pride." Once you "Feel the Latin Sting" and see what the "Latin Dream" is, we're sure you'll experience things that you never knew were available to you. As a non-Latino, you will experience something new that will broaden your horizons. The success of this organization and its ability to continue to help the Latin students on campus is dependent on your support.

We encourage you to bring a friend or two and come down to our office where there's always a smiling face waiting to greet you when you arrive.

That's what LASO is all about, students helping students, but the first move is yours. En la unidad esta la fuerza. Let us unite and together we can become as strong as ever.

Sincerely,

Greeks on the cat walk...

by Sam Rock

Several fraternity and sorority members showed off the latest in Greek apparel during a Greek fashion show held on Oct. 26. The show, which was sponsored by Lambda Tau Omega sorority, was held in Memorial Auditorium.

Approximately 100 students turned out to see the show which was divided into three parts. The first part displayed "Back to School" apparel, which primarily featured Greek jackets with letters and crests.

The second part of the show displayed clothing for the beach.

Many fraternity and sorority members displayed t-shirts and caps featuring their letters.

In the third part of the show, the Greek members showed off their dance moves in a club setting while wearing combinations of Greek jackets and t-shirts.

The crowd was very enthusiastic and the participating Greek members appeared to enjoy putting on a presentation that was both professional and entertaining.

Many of the clothes featured in the show were provided by University Apparel in East Orange.

ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT

MSC is given a wake up call

by Cliff Annicelli

There's something very strange going on here at MSC. Just when you thought that MSC was as musically dead as Cyndi Lauper's career, the fine people at Class One Concerts have quietly turned our sleepy campus into—dare I say it—a musical mecca. Maybe they just have more money to spend after last year's series of debacles, but whatever it is, keep it up. The most recent example of this magical musical transformation came in the form of the Soup Dragons, Tom-Tom Club, James and Fuschnickens last Monday night in Memorial Auditorium.

Fuschnickens, who appeared in place of Black Sheep, started off the evening with a set of fast-rhythm-ing, good-timing East coast rap. The group's performance got off to a slow start; no, actually the crowd got off to a slow start, and the group tried their best to compensate. The mostly flannel-clad, Doc Martened crowd seemed a bit leery at first but eventually got into their own sort of groove. Thank the Fuschnickens for this because they basically hand-held the audience throughout the show, teaching them how to properly experience the performance. It worked, though, and soon everyone was merrily dancing, shouting out catchy refrains full of cross-cultural allusions and waving their middle fingers in the true F.U. style.

James were next. James were supposed to be the "Next Big Thing" out of England three or four next big things ago. Years later it seems like the U.S. is finally ready to accept their Simple Minds-meets-Manchester sound. Oddly, the band played the majority of their set without the aid of direct spotlights and instead were illuminated from lights at the foot of the stage that gave the proceedings an eerie feel when combined with the band's rhythm-heavy textural guitar sound. The band usually managed to walk the fine line between sincerity and Bono-esque bombast the most of the set. But on songs like "Ball of Frustration" and "Low, Low, Low," the James boys tried a little too hard to sound profound. Hint: subtlety. "Sit Down," James's anthem, is and was a great song because it doesn't attempt to bang you over the head with overt politics. The song is simple and direct and was the highlight of the night.

Tom-Tom Club, featuring Tina Weymouth and Chris Frantz of the Talking Heads, were third on the bill. The bands light-weight party-style funk was embarrassingly bad. The band looked like they were having one hell of a good time. They smiled a lot. Too bad their redeeming features stop there. The Tom-Toms have yet to evolve past the "You Sexy Thing" level of air-head pop. Debbie Gibson is harder edged and the B-52s sound like Public Enemy in comparison. At the end, they played

Witch trials in the Theatre

by Sandra Cammilleri

Arthur Miller's The Crucible presented by the Studio Theater Series, made its debut on Tues., Nov. 3. A drama rich with meaning and emotion, The Crucible retells the story of the Salem Witch Trials.

When Reverend Samuel Parris (played by Frank DiCocco) learns that Abigail Williams (played by Antoinette Mangano) was dancing in the woods with Betty Parris (played by Stacy Bellon), and as a result of this, Betty has suddenly taken ill, he becomes anxious and upset. Rumors that witchcraft is being practiced are prevalent in the community. Anyone mentioned as having been seen with the devil is brought to trial and must confess or be hung!

Aesthetically, The Crucible combines the visual elements of the production impressively well. The designers, Scott C. Nelson (set designer), Matt Nowak (lighting designer), and Amy Horvath (costume designer) have recreated an atmosphere which enhances the authenticity of the production. The set, though subtle in design, makes a strong statement. It evokes the feeling of cold austerity. The most appealing piece is a stained glass rose window. When lighted, it provides a brilliant backdrop of color and shadows! The lighting embellishes the mood of foreboding doom and the costumes accurately portray the puritanical garb worn in the late 1600's.

Under the direction of Arlen Benson, The Crucible brings together the talent of 23 theater students who assume a diversity of roles. As a whole, the cast is brimming with intensity of emotion as each character fights to get his/her view across in a frantic effort to bring forth justice. Collectively, the cast gives a fine performance.

Some exceptional performances are rendered by individual performers. Of such notable merit are Frank DiCocco, Kathryn Cirincione, Luis Rodriguez, Phil Cirincione, and Karen Finckenor.

Frank DiCocco as Reverend Parris is outstanding in his portrayal of a man of dominance. Luis Rodriguez as John Proctor and Karen Finckenor as his wife, Elizabeth Proctor, have some compelling scenes together. Both performers imbue their characters with fortitude and courage. Kathryn Cirincione is endearing in her portrayal of Mary Warren. She captures eloquently the whimsy and frivolity of a young girl. And, Phil Cirincione as Reverend John Hale is captivating in his role. Like DiCocco, Cirincione impressively renders his character as a staunch theologian. Yet, he also adds a sense of compassion to offset Parris' strict austerity. These qualities are made apparent in Cirincione's modes of expression.

Director Arlen Benson commented about his working experiences with the actors stating: "They are 100 percent committed to what they are doing. They were a pleasure to work with!"

Performances for The Crucible run Nov 3-7 at 8pm and Nov 8 at 2pm. For tickets, call 893-5112.

Rockin' for the homeless

Square One performing in the ballrooms

by Nicole Plsano

As part of an on-going program called the Homecoming for the Homeless Fund, Class One Concerts sponsored a concert featuring several bands.

On Oct. 26, Cupid and Psyche, Square One, Romeo Zulu, and Fear of Falling joined together in the student center ballrooms to promote the audiences support. The individuals attending the concert were asked to bring canned goods and money donations, said Paula Salvin, executive chair of the Homeless Committee.

C1C hopes to get other organizations on campus involved in efforts to raise money, food, and clothing. "Fraternities and sororities or any other organizations on campus that want to help out are welcome... We hope to get an umbrella of people involved," said Paula Salvin.

This program for the homeless started the first week of October and will run until late November or early December.

C1C is working with Habitat for the Homeless, which aids the homeless, said Paula Salvin.

Any donations of food and clothing should be placed in boxes which are located in the student center and in the dorms. Money donations should be brought directly to the C1C office located in the student center room 117.

Def Leppard getting on with it

by George Olschewski

Def Leppard's music drips with commercialism. The songs are cut with Top 40 cookie cutters, ready-made for the radio. Pyromania was like that. Hysteria was like that. Adrenalize, their new one, is like that.

But who cares?

On Tuesday, Oct. 27, Def Leppard put on a spectacular show at the Brendan Byrne Arena, one that rivalled their last outing back in 1988. For those who were lucky enough to attend that show four years ago, they performed "in the round," which is a round (logical), rotating stage. No seat in the arena was a bad one. You can see everyone as they ran around the stage, with drummer Rick Allen positioned dead center. When the concert began, Dirty Harry's voice cut through the roar of the audience with his "This is a .44 Magnum" speech, and when it came time for the line, "Do you feel lucky?" lead singer Joe Elliott piped in, "Do you wanna get rocked?"

They played for the better part of three hours, playing songs from every album. The light show might not be as good as Pink Floyd's, but it was just as enjoyable. The lighting seemed to emphasize the rapport between band and audience. Elliott made a brief speech chronicling the band's stroke of bad luck over the past eight years. Rick Allen lost an arm in a car accident, and rather than breaking up and throwing it all in, the band redesigned the drum kit to accommodate their comrade. Guitarist

Steve Clark died soon after production of the Adrenalize album, which caused more problems. The surviving four asked themselves, do we go on, or do we break up? Def Leppard, as Elliott put it, are masters at the art of "getting on with it."

Steve wouldn't want the group to break up, so they decided to scrap the original Adrenalize tracks, and reordered the album as a foursome, as a tribute to him. Along the way, they picked up guitarist Vivian Campbell, who is a worthy successor the steering wheel when you listen to it in your car. I can't call it pop/glam metal, because their music doesn't really fit the term. These guys aren't poseurs, they're just five guys that enjoy what they do.

Def Leppard's most memorable set of the night was "Def Leppard: Unplugged," an acoustic version of their favorite songs. They played parts of Led Zeppelin and Bon Jovi tunes. Elliott, Campbell, and bassist Rick Savage joined together for a great rendition of "Bringing On The Heartbreak." For an encore performance, they brought Jersey rockers Jon Bon Jovi and Richie Sambora on stage. It wasn't hard to see that these British dudes enjoy performing on stage, and everyone in the arena came out of the concert feeling great, and a little closer to the band.

Hopefully, we won't have to wait another four years for another album.

to Clark.

Def Leppard's music hasn't changed much over the years, especially between the past three albums. They play music that's uplifting, gets you moving, and makes you tap your hands on

CONCERT, from 15

"Psychokiller." David Byrne was wise to get out while he had the chance.

Last up was the Soup Dragons. It seems that the Soup Dragons have gone a bit Las Vegas (or at least a bit Carter USM-ish) since the last time they toured in 1990. Since then though, the band has added a pair of back-up singers and doubled their quotient of trippy lights and impressionistic film loop. One man's gimmick is another's ambience, but the Soup Dragons seem to have forsaken their formerly hard-edged sound for a more professional and glitzy presentation. Any sort of scruffy charm the band had got lost beneath all the clutter. Old favorites like "Mother Universe" and "Love God" still packed a punch but the newer songs never reached the same level of intensity. At times the band wondered aloud at the audience's apparent lack of all-out response to their show. Maybe next time the band should let loose a little more. Soup Dragons songs used to have guitar solos in them. What happened? At the end of the show the members of the Tom-Tom Club and James came out to sing along with the Dragons on their smash "I'm Free." Finally the Soup Dragons that I saw two years ago showed up.

Look in next weeks paper for interviews with all four bands.

More from the "Television Violence Causes Hairy Palms, Schizophrenia, Mass Murderers, And Cats Going To The Toilet Coalition," it's violence in sports. Yessiree Bob, there are those out there (that are looking to get sports such as football, basketball (what with wild men like Charles Barkley), and any full-contact sport either regulated or kicked off the airways altogether. Why? Too violent.

Oh me, oh my, first it was Bugs Bunny, now it's Lawrence Taylor.

Their argument (the above organization's name has been changed to protect the stupid) is that all the sacks, hacks, and tackles are too violent and therefore, not healthy for young minds to watch. Such things are evil. Our children might just sign onto a football team and attempt to emulate their favorite sports heroes and, in the process, harm their widdle tender bodies. Yes, they will.

First of all, untie those apron strings, Mum and Daddy. If anything, when the little bugger grows up, you might just asphyxiate the little linebacker. Sure, he might get hurt a little in football. I sincerely doubt that his adult life will be in jeopardy if he calls for Blue Twenty-three. That is, of course, he doesn't get hit in the family jewels, in which case, his adult life might seriously be affected.

And basketball? With the exception of a few shoves and the Barkleys of the NBA, basketball is the least violent contact sport, aside from cross-country chess. You take a round, orange ball and throw it into a net. Ooooooh, real violent. Yeah, tensions can run high, but there's no more bump and grind than a heated Lambada dance contest.

There is a little too much sex on television, however. I will agree on that. I would rather my kids come and ask me where babies came from rather than watch some girl get raped on a soap opera only then to marry the scumbag a few weeks later. What kind of an example are we setting? Get raped, then marry your rapist? I don't think so! Homette don't play that!

Oh well. Maybe I'm just talking nonsense. Maybe sports should be banned because they're too violent. Well, let's take that logic one step further. Gambling is supposed to be a sin, yet they allow bingo in churches. But that's another story.

Peace.

Attention!

Any MSC student that is a member of a band!

If you would like your group to be reviewed, please leave information about your band in the Arts mailbox located in the Montclarion office, room 113.

Welcome, loyal readers, to another thrilling installment of PROPHET BIGG. As always I encourage you to write me with your comments and questions about the entertainment industry and previous installments of Prophet Bigg. You can drop those letters at The Montclarion offices in the Student Center Annex. I will attempt to find an answer in the following issue. And now sit back and gaze with me into the future.

• Jay Leno has been given warning. If he doesn't bring up his numbers during the November Sweeps, he faces the possibility of being replaced. By who, you ask? I think it'll be either Dana Carvey or Dennis Miller. What does that mean? Well, probably, David Letterman might accept an offer from CBS to do a show in the Tonight Show time slot. Very interesting, no.

• In our "who gives a shit" category this week, the distributors and creators of American Gladiators, that kickin' show where they put Vic the Viking versus Phil the bed-ridden accountant in nonsense games of physical skill and endurance, are suing the creators of Knights and Warriors (See above description and add a twist of medievalism. Not!) for copyright infringement. Please.

• Also suing is Traci Ulman. She is suing Matt Groening for a cut of the Simpsons fortune. Her grounds are that they first appeared on her show. Poor little Traci. Her show bombed and now she wants a piece of the over abundant pie. You know, I wonder why the producers of All in The Family didn't sue The Jeffersons producers? Or any of the other shows that were spin offs. Good sense, probably.

• Well, well, well. It appears that someone decided, in a drunken stupor, to give Howard Stern another shot at TV. The producers at the cable channel E, have granted the over-rated radio personality a show with a "interview-style format." So Peter Cadbury and the rest of you slobbering Stern fans can rest easy. Your hero is returning.

Don't mind being blind

by Alex Castlino

Blind Melon. You might say that's a pretty strange name for a band. If they sound familiar it's because they have been busy this past year. They toured with the Big Audio Dynamite II, Public Image Limited and Live on the MTV 120 Minutes tour. Vocalist Shannon Hoon can be seen in the Guns N' Roses "Don't Cry" video. He's the guy that you don't recognize singing with Axl Rose (it seems like there's many people on stage with Axl Rose that you don't recognize these days). The Melons have also been recording their self-titled debut album in Seattle. (Don't worry, they're from California) and we finally got to hear it this week. Surprisingly it may be the album of the year.

Containing the dual guitar jam of Christopher Thorn and Roger Stevens, the jazz bass and backing vocals of Brad Smith and the intricate drumming of Glen Graham, BM tightly mesh 60's and 70's style rock while vocalist Hoon delivers his high pitched tone that brings forward the strong emotion of their songs.

Rick Parashar, who has worked on the latest albums of Pearl Jam and Temple of the Dog, gives the album a live feel with his production. BM represents a style that is similar to Seattle's Pearl Jam but with less grungy, distorted guitars. Throughout the 13 tracks BM go from a fierce approach ("Soak the Sin," "Time," "Dear Ol' Dad") to a more mellow uplifting mode ("Change," "No Rain," "Drive"), sometimes using both elements within a single song ("Deserted," "Paper Scratcher").

Lyricaly, BM want to fly far away where they could practice their own state of mind and get no hassles from society. They seem very down on the close minded people that surround them and are very spiritually motivated. A fine example is "I Wonder." "I'd Like to daze away to a place no one has known, in a state of mind I could call mine, that only I could own, where I could hum a tune any time I choose, and there's no such thing as time, where I could feel no pain only calm and sane, what a place for one to find."

Early favorites of mine include "Tones of Home," an uplifting number that truly displays BM as an exceptional musical outfit, and "Sleepyhouse," a delicate, mesmerizing psychedelic tune that shines with Hoon's vocals.

These guys are playing the recently re-opened Stone Pony in Asbury Park on November 7 with Widespread Panic. I'm giving serious consideration to checking them out.

So if you enjoy this style of rock and are in need of a band that thrives on music alone, check out this album. I expect the band to be well received.

Red Hawk football recap: MSC-21 Salisbury State-12

by Michael Frasco

Since we at The Montclarion were away and didn't provide you football diehards with any information last week, we figured we'd recap MSC's victory over Salisbury State on Oct. 24.

John Walker rushed for 156 yards on one touchdown, and Scott Rubinetti kicked two field goals, to lift MSC to a 21-12 victory over Salisbury State (Md.) at Seagull Stadium.

Walker's one-yard run gave

MSC a 7-0 lead in the first quarter.

Salisbury State scored nine straight points and was up 9-7 late in the third when Tyrone Rolls ran 12 yards for an MSC score. The two-point conversion attempt by quarterback Darren Volker gave

MSC a 15-9 lead. Scott Rubinetti's two 20-yard field goals in the fourth quarter capped the Red Hawk scoring, while Salisbury's Matt McGinniss' kick from 28 yards out was all the SSU could muster, dropping their record to 2-4.

MSC's Larry Thompson came up with 14 tackles, forced two fumbles, and recovered another. The Red Hawks also picked off three passes. Joe Blackwell, Fred Kaes, and Robert Pitts had one interception each for MSC.

Men's and women's hoops kick off '92-'93 campaigns at MSC's first-ever Midnight Madness

by Kelth A. Idec

The Red Hawks men's and women's basketball teams showcased their respective talents at MSC's first-ever Midnight Madness on Halloween evening.

In case you're wondering, Midnight Madness is what college basketball programs consider their pre-season bonanza.

The event usually includes practice drills, player introductions, dunk contests, and three-point contests. It takes place on the eve of the official beginning of practice time for college basketball teams.

That date has been pushed back two weeks effective for the '92-'93 season.

Teams used to be able to begin practice on Oct. 15. Now the official starting date is Nov. 1. Thus, Halloween night is the proper time for Midnight Madness.

Division I programs such as Seton Hall and Rutgers get huge turnouts for their extravaganzas.

The turnout for MSC's show wasn't huge, but encouraging. Nearly 200 fans showed up to support Red Hawks basketball. The event took place in Panzer Gymnasium after the MSC-Trenton State football game at Sprague Field.

The fact that it was Halloween night was partially responsible for the small turnout.

"People go to parties on Halloween. I could tell that we weren't going to get a large crowd due to fact that only a little more than 1,200 people showed up for the football game. Usually 6-7,000 people attend MSC-Trenton games," said MSC Sports Information Director Al Langer.

Red Hawks' women's basketball coach Alice DeFazio was pleased with the event, but not its timing.

"I went very well, but losing two weeks of practice time really hurts," said DeFazio.

"The incoming freshmen will not get the proper amount of time to learn the system. There are a lot of things to take in and now there just isn't enough time to be as prepared as we're used to being," added the second-year coach.

Look for the men's and women's '92-'93 basketball previews in a future edition of The Montclarion.

MSC volleyball's disappointing 3-23 season comes to an end

by Nicole Festa

Over the past two weeks, the Red Hawk volleyball team has been very busy. They finished the regular season with a record of 3-23. In an NJAC game the Red Hawks swept Ramapo by the scores of 15-9, 15-0, and 15-9 on Oct. 20. The team was lead by senior Denise Chouinard, who had 10 aces.

Despite strong efforts by Angelique Irizarry, Edith Wilson, Yocasta Garcia, and Denise Chouinard, the volleyball team lost to Mount Holyoke by the scores of 5-15, 15-8, and 15-9 on Oct. 24.

In their final regular season game, the Red Hawks fell to the clutches of NJAC rival Kean in three straight matches, 15-5, 15-3, and 15-3.

The Red Hawks ended their season this past weekend by losing both matches in the NJAC Championships, a double elimination tournament hosted by Stockton State College. The Red Hawks were seeded sixth. One of those matches was lost to the eventual tournament champions, Rutgers Newark.

This tournament ended what has been a long and frustrating season for the Red Hawk volleyball team. Anita Kubicka, the team's head coach has described this season as "challenging, in all sense of the word." She went on to say that one of the challenges faced this year was the loss of several players during the season due to "conflicts." "On any team, when you play together as a cohesive team, you play well. In volleyball, there is no such thing as a dominant player. The players depend on each other, and at the end of each game there's always a different star, which is nice," stated Kubicka.

However, she did mention a few players' names who have been successful this season. Senior captain Denise Chouinard led the team up to tournament play with five aces, was second in kills with 53, and second in assists with 97. Sophomores Edith Wilson, the starting middle blocker, and Ellen Falkow, who had a minimum playing time last year, but proved to be an asset this year were said to be the two most improved players on the team.

"We played a lot of tough and challenging matches, especially during mid-season. When you play hard and lose there's nothing you can do. These girls gave a strong team effort," said Kubicka in her closing comments.

Looking towards next year, the Red Hawks will lose three key players- two to eligibility, and one to country preference. Yes, junior, Tara Page will return to Australia next year, but Kubicka referred to Tara's inspirational play as a "cultural experience."

Just a reminder to all those interested in playing volleyball in the spring, there will be team competition. All those interested should contact Kubicka at 893-5233 or visit her in the Volleyball/Softball Office located downstairs in Panzer Gymnasium.

Rob Campos, Editor-In-Chief of The Anarchist Syndicate:

1. x-N.Y. Giants -9 over Green Bay. I really don't know why.
2. x-Denver -6 over N.Y. Jets. One good game does not a season make.
3. Dallas -6 1/2 over x-Detroit. Hard to pick because both teams have the same colors.
4. x-Philadelphia -6 1/2 over L.A. Raiders. I like green.
5. Kansas City -6 1/2 over x-San Diego. The Chiefs are getting a wild card this year.

Keith A. Idec, Sports Editor:

1. Green Bay +9 over x-N.Y. Giants. I hope Giants' fans didn't get too excited this past week because QB Brett Favre and WR Sterling Sharpe will lead the Pack to victory on Sunday.
2. N.Y. Jets +6 over x-Denver. "J", "E", "T", "S." Jets, Jets, Jets.
3. Dallas -6 1/2 over x-Detroit. The Lions are no longer unbeatable at The Silverdome, and the Cowboys haven't forgotten last season's playoff embarrassment.
4. x-New England +8 over New Orleans. Year of the unexpected. Shouldn't happen, so it will.
5. Miami -6 1/2 over x-Indianapolis. Revenge from Week 8 could get ugly.

Kevin Schwoebel, Prophet Bigg:

4. x-Seattle +13 over Washington. My Seahawks.
5. x-Chicago -9 1/2 over Cincinnati. Ditka! Ditka! Ditka!

Bob Wintermute, Managing Editor of The Anarchist Syndicate:

1. x-N.Y. Giants -9 over Green Bay. The Giants aren't that bad yet.
2. x-Denver -6 over N.Y. Jets. So O'Brien had a good day?
3. Dallas -6 1/2 over x-Detroit. Dallas will be in the Super Bowl this year.
4. L.A. Raiders +6 1/2 over Philadelphia. I really dislike the Eagles.
5. New Orleans -8 over x-New England. I had to pick one more.

Injuries unable to slow cross country's Dennis and Lindo

by Mark Alan Belnay

The last two weeks have been tough for the MSC cross country team. With both Sharon Lindo and Wayne Dennis, leaders of the women's and men's teams respectively, each missing races due to injuries, the team had to raise its level of performance to compensate for the losses. Just as any great sports team must do when injuries unexpectedly occur, the Red Hawks came up with strong performances from other members of the team. With the number of talented individuals on the team it is easy to forget that the MSC cross country runners are exactly that, a team.

With Wayne Dennis missing from the men's team due to injury, it was Hector Rivera that stepped in at the Drew Invationals on Oct. 24, and led the team with a finish of fourth place overall. Finishing second for MSC's men's team was Jenabu Williams, who continues to impress. Sharon Lindo again led the women with a second place finish overall to continue her strong performance this season. Rhonda Westbrook added another strong performance by finishing second, for MSC, behind Lindo.

This past week the team was at Ramapo College with another injury to overcome. Lindo was sidelined due to injuries to both her shin and groin, which set the stage for freshman Lisa Billingham to shine. Billingham led the women's team with an impressive fourth place finish overall while Rhonda Westbrook's strong performance was negated due to problems with the race's course.

Wayne Dennis returned to the men's team and picked up where he left off in his last race, in first place. Dennis has been brilliant all season and left no room for argument by turning in a first place performance with a time of 26.16. Jenabu Williams continued to run strong with a time of 29.50 to notch MSC's second best time. John Brennan and Barry Camhi each ran excellent races while finishing with times of 30.01 and 31.01 respectively.

This week the team travels to Stockton State where it will square off against favored Rowan College at the NJAC Championships. Head coach John Blanton looks forward to having a healthy team and plans to use this week's action as a stepping stone for the NCAA Regionals on Nov. 14th. With strong performances from Wayne Dennis and Sharon Lindo the men's and women's teams should be in good shape for the upcoming challenges they are to face.

A VIEW FROM THE PRESSBOX

by Keith A. Idec

1992-93 NBA PREVIEW: Can Chicago pull off a three-peat?

The NBA just won't be the same without Magic Johnson and Larry Bird. These two men are largely responsible for the resurrection of the league in the early 1980's.

However, the show must go on. The torch is still carried by Michael Jordan, basketball's main attraction. Jordan and his Chicago Bulls are the favorite to win the 1992-93 NBA Championship. Can they do it? Yes. Will they do it? That's a whole other animal.

The New York Knicks, Cleveland Cavaliers, Utah Jazz, Portland Trailblazers, and Phoenix Suns are all capable of making a run at the title. Again, will they?

Here's a brief overview of the league. Teams are listed according to their projected division finish from first to last.

EASTERN CONFERENCE

Atlantic Division:

1. New York. The Knicks have added more quality players to their roster than any other team. President Dave Checketts, Director of Player Personnel Ernie Grunfeld, and head coach Pat Riley have put together a team that has a legitimate chance to make the NBA Finals.

An excellent defensive team, the Knicks have now become a solid team from the perimeter. As any Knick follower would know, outside shooting has not been a strong point for this team over the last few years. Rolando Blackman, Tony Campbell, and Hubert Davis can all stroke it. This will free up Ewing in the post.

New York is also a deep team, bringing John Starks, Anthony Mason, Charles Smith, and Greg Anthony off the bench for significant minutes.

A potential 60-win season looms in the air.

2. Boston. The loss of Larry Bird hurts. It's time for Reggie Lewis to step up as the Celtics' go-to guy, which he began to do last year.

The franchise could be in trouble be in trouble when Robert Parish and Kevin McHale retire. They need frontcourt players, but keep acquiring guards.

They also have a logjam at point guard. Dee Brown can be a superb leader, but needs to be given control of the team.

Rick Fox should be a major contributor. Xavier McDaniel can still play, but won't make too big of a difference. Despite their problems, the Celtics have enough talent and experience to put together a 50 win season.

3. New Jersey. The Nets now have one of the top two coaches in the league, which is a step in the right direction.

Derrick Coleman is already a star, and Kenny Anderson will be. Drazen Petrovic, Chris Morris, Rumeal Robinson, Sam Bowie, Chris Dudley, Tate George, and Chucky Brown comprise a solid nucleus for this up and coming team.

4. Philadelphia. The 76ers won't be as bad as some people think. Jeff Hornacek, Johnny Dawkins, and Hersey Hawkins make up the NBA's best three-guard rotation. Clarence Weatherspoon has the potential to be a Barkely minus the mouth.

5. Miami. Rony Seikaly, Glen Rice, Steve Smith, and Willie Burton should lead the Heat to the playoffs for the second straight year. Rookie Harold Miner can flat-out score.

6. Orlando. One marquee player (Shaquille O'Neal) and a quality supporting cast (Nick Anderson and Dennis Scott) should make this team a playoff regular in the mid to late '90's. Not yet, though.

7. Washington. A rebuilding year for the Bullets. Nice base with Pervis Ellison, Tom Gugliotta, and Michael Adams.

Central Division:

1. Chicago. Jordan and Scottie Pippen make up the NBA's best one-two punch. Horace Grant is solid and the addition of Rodney McCray should help.

2. Cleveland. Although they didn't add any players to help, Brad Daugherty, Larry Nance, and Mark Price make the Cavs contenders.

3. Charlotte. Larry Johnson, Kendall Gill, and Alonzo Mourning will get the Hornets into the playoffs for the first time.

4. Detroit. An old team, but still a threat at playoff time. Joe Dumars and Isiah Thomas are still feared, and Dennis Rodman is a great rebounder and defender.

5. Atlanta. Mookie Blaylock gives the Hawks the true point guard they've needed. Success depends on how Dominique Wilkins recovers from his heel injury.

6. Indiana. Pooh Richardson and Reggie Miller have been reunited and make up one of the NBA's top backcourts. Rookie Malik Sealy and Dale Davis should provide help. Detlef Schrempf is talented but underrated.

7. Milwaukee. A very young team that should be interesting in a few years. Todd Day will be a star. Head coach Mike Dunleavy got the job he really wanted.

2. San Antonio. The loss of Rod Strickland hurts, but the Spurs will manage. The additions of Lloyd Daniels and Vinny Del Negro should help fill the void. The absence of Terry Cummings could hurt, although Antoine Carr can play. Robinson's great, which gives them a chance.

3. Houston. Hakeem wants out. This causes internal problems. If he stays, they'll make the playoffs. Kenny Smith and Vernon Maxwell are solid at guard, and lottery pick Robert Horry will become a household name.

4. Denver. Young, but to be reckoned with. LaPhonso Ellis, Bryant Stith, Mark Macon, and Reggie Williams will keep the Nuggets competitive. This year will be Chris Jackson's last chance in Denver to prove he can play.

5. Dallas. Major rebuilding project. Look for point guard Derek Harper to be dealt for younger talent or draft picks. Swingman Jimmy Jackson will be an All-Star. A couple of the Mavs' top picks have flopped which could send head coach Richie Adubato packing. Fat Lever still has some life left in him.

6. Minnesota. The T-Wolves finally added a couple of well-known players. Rookie Christian Laettner should have a splendid career, and Chuck Person lends the squad personality as well as talent.

Pacific Division:

1. Phoenix. The additions of Charles Barkley and Danny Ainge to holdovers Kevin Johnson, Dan Majerle, Jerrod Mustaf, and Tom Chambers should lead the Suns to the division title. Portland will have something to say about that.

Barkley finally got his wish by being traded and now it's time to walk it like he talks it.

2. Portland. Rod Strickland joins Terry Porter and Clyde Drexler to form the Western Conference's toughest backcourt trio. Buck Williams quietly does a great job on defensively and on the boards.

Jerome Kersey, Cliff Robinson, Kevin Duckworth, and Mario Elie form a quality supporting cast. Rookie forward Tracy Murray doesn't have star potential but can help from the perimeter.

3. Golden State. The talent is there for Don Nelson to work with. The 91-92 Coach of the Year still needs a true center, but this team can still contend.

Chris Mullin does just about everything. Billy Owens provides the utmost in versatility. Tim Hardaway is almost unstoppable. Sarunas Marciulionis adds another attractive option on offense.

Newcomer Jeff Grayer and rookie guard Latrell Sprewell should shine in the Warriors' up-tempo system. Why hasn't this team gone farther in the playoffs? Good question.

4. Seattle. Ricky Pierce and Shawn Kemp are the focal points of the Supersonics' offense. The versatile Derrick McKey contributes, but only in spurts. Seattle needs McKey to step up his game to move on in the playoffs. Benoit Benjamin is an underachiever, but plays well more often than not. George Karl did a fantastic job with this team in '91-'92.

5. L.A. Clippers. Danny Manning has returned to his pre-knee injury form. He should become a perennial All-Star. Ken Norman, Ron Harper, and Loy Vaught will help to put the Clips in the playoffs again.

Mark Jackson, who rejuvenated his career last season, provides leadership and stability to Larry Brown's squad.

6. L.A. Lakers. With Magic Johnson the Lakers could have made a serious run at the division title. Without him, they're an average team with a chance come playoff time due to experience.

Many of the Lakers are aging (James Worthy, Byron Scott, Sedale Threatt, Sam Perkins), and these next two seasons could be their final chances at the title, should they get that opportunity. This could provide motivation, and you may see the Lakers overachieve.

7. Sacramento. Despite obvious talent, this looks like a franchise that may never win. Forwards Lionel Simmons and rookie Walt Williams provide quality in the frontcourt. New coach Garry St. Jean (former Warriors' assistant) could be the only one who can convince star guard Mitch Richmond to stay after his contract expires after this season.

WESTERN CONFERENCE

Midwest Division:

1. Utah. One of the three possible NBA finalists from the West. Karl Malone, John Stockton, Jay Humphries, David Benoit, and Ty Corbin could make things interesting for Portland.

Michael Williams, who the T-Wolves got in the Chuck Person deal is one of the NBA's better point guards. Also, Doug West has become a solid two-guard. However, they'll still be lucky to win 25 games.

MSC wins fifth straight, stopping Trenton State, 17-5 Injury proves costly to Red Hawks as several key players are injured

by Michael Frasco

The MSC defense, led by freshman defensive end Jeff Bargiel's 14 tackles and record five and a half sacks, stopped Trenton State 17-5, before 1,287 at Sprague Field on Saturday.

Bargiel, in just his second start playing for the injured John Clidy, broke the MSC record of five sacks that three time All-American Paul Cioffi established against Mansfield State (Pa.) in 1988.

MSC (5-2 overall, 4-0 NJAC) which won its fifth consecutive game, held Trenton State (2-6, 1-3) to 123 yards total offense. However, the Red Hawks victory came with a high price as its top two tailbacks had to leave the game due to injuries. John Walker, MSC's all-time leading rusher, left in the first quarter with a slight ankle sprain. Walker finished with seven yards on six carries. Walker may miss this week's game against Jersey City State. Jerry Martress, MSC's other tailback, wasn't as fortunate as Walker, as he suffered a season-ending knee injury in the second period. Martress had three carries for 65 yards.

It was Martress, a junior, who broke a 54-yard run to give MSC a 7-0 lead with 5:28 left in the first quarter. Trenton State then scored on a safety with seven seconds left in the first, when punter Scott Rubinetti received a high snap, jumped for the ball and landed on the back line of the end zone. Rubinetti was filling in at punter for Rob Funicello, who was lost with an ankle injury.

Trenton State's Bill Sheakicked a 35-yard field goal to close the gap to 7-5 with 7:06 left in second quarter.

Bargiel, a freshman defensive end, sparked MSC's defense.

However, MSC struck again to make it 14-5 with just under three minutes left in the half when freshman quarterback Darren Volker hit Tyrone Rolls on a 36-yard touchdown pass, capping off a seven-play 79-yard drive.

Rubinetti added MSC's final score on a 22-yard field goal in the third quarter.

Overall, the Red Hawks had 272 yards in total offense, with 171 on the ground. Freshman Neil Ruiz, who finished at tailback, had 59 yards on 23 carries.

Defensively, Larry Thompson collected 11 tackles and one sack, and senior inside linebacker Duane Grade added 12 tackles. The defensive tallied nine sacks.

HAWK NOTES.....MSC stayed undefeated in New Jersey Athletic Conference play with the victory over Trenton State. The Red Hawks are tied with Rowan College for first place. Rowan, 8-0 overall, 4-0 NJAC, stayed unbeaten with a 27-7 victory over Kean on Saturday.....Bargiel was named NJAC Player of the Week for his efforts on Saturday.....MSC is currently ranked #6 in the Eastern Region Football Poll.....MSC will face Jersey City State this week, but faces Rowan for its last regular season game on Nov. 14 at Sprague Field. This one could decide the NJAC Championship as well as keep MSC's playoff hopes intact, should the Red Hawks get by JCSC.

Men's soccer receives NCAA tournament bid for fourth consecutive season

by Craig Berosh

For the MSC men's soccer team there was good news and bad news last week. First the good news. The Red Hawks have earned a NCAA playoff berth for the fourth straight year. Now the bad news. MSC had their 10 game winning streak snapped on Halloween by the Kean Cougars, who are also MSC's first round opponent in the NCAA Metro Region Tournament this weekend.

The Red Hawks have compiled a 13-4 record this season (7-2 NJAC) under second year coach Rob Chesney. The '92 campaign has been highlighted by a 10 game winning streak which included victories over top-ranked Vassar, King's Point and Trenton State College. MSC is the third seed in the four-team playoff which will determine who will continue on to the Eastern Region finals. "It has been a successful season and hopefully it will last three more weeks," said Chesney. "We were up and down in the beginning but we found a groove due to hard work and time."

The Metro Region Tournament on Saturday is an all NJAC affair. Tournament host Rowan College is the top seed and will take on fourth seeded Trenton in the first round. MSC will play Kean, for the second time in a week, in the other semifinal clash. The finals will be held Sunday in Glassboro.

For Chesney, the tournament bid marks his second straight appearance in the NCAA playoffs since taking the helm from current St. John's head coach Dave Masur in 1991. In last year's playoff MSC was eliminated by TSC who went on to become the 1991 national champion runner-up. "This year we are just as intense but a little more relaxed," said Chesney.

On Halloween afternoon MSC was defeated 3-0 by NJAC rival Kean. The Red Hawks fell behind early against the home team and when MSC midfielder Fernando Barbato drilled a shot off the Cougar crossbar, one had a feeling that it was not the Red Hawks' day. The Cougars added another first half goal and MSC was forced to play catch up in the second half.

The second 45 minutes were as frustrating as the first. Kean's counter attack goal put the game out of reach and the winning streak was halted at ten, two short of the school record of 12. Goaltender Mark Williams also had his new school record of seven consecutive shutouts stopped by Kean's first half score. "I think we learned a lesson in the loss to Kean. It is okay to lose if you can learn from it and correct the mistakes," Coach Chesney said.

Correcting some mistakes is exactly what the Red Hawks will have to do this weekend. Keys to an MSC victory on Saturday will be containing Kean's talented frontline. In Saturday's loss, forwards Freddy Guiridan and Johnny Ariza presented a dangerous challenge for the MSC defense. They combined for all three goals by beating MSC defensemen and getting close range shots on Williams. "Their two front runners are a dangerous combination," said Chesney.

On offense the Red Hawks are going to need contributions from the team's leading scorer, Eric Neubart, and forward Carlos Hanze combined with another strong performance in the midfield from Barbato to win this Saturday. "We are going to generate more offense through our midfield. We have a lot of pride and we owe Kean one," said MSC's head man.

Don't be surprised to see MSC beat Kean in an emotion-filled match that sees the MSC offense get back on track. In the other bracket I like Rowan at home to beat Trenton and move on to the Finals on Sunday. A victory in Sunday's finals would take MSC's best effort of the season. In an earlier meeting Rowan downed the Red Hawks 4-2 at Sprague Field. Chesney's outlook on the tournament is a confident one. "The tournament has four teams and any one is capable of winning. We are going to win."

Scouting report: Jersey City State

The Gothic Knights are struggling under first-year head coach Bill Olear. Their record currently stands at an unflattering 0-8 (0-5 NJAC).

However, MSC has been struck with injuries, and star tailback John Walker remains questionable for Saturday's game. This could open up the doors for Jersey City State at the Tidlands Complex.

An upset over the Red Hawks would be a big lift for the Gothic Knights. Thus far the '92 season has been one that they might want to forget.

Playing the spoiler is just what JCSC has in mind. MSC cannot lose another game if it expects to have a shot at both the NJAC Championship or an NCAA tournament bid.

JCSC will seek help from all-purpose man Rodney Bond. The senior is currently fifth in the NJAC in receiving, sixth in rushing, and has scored seven touchdowns.

Sophomore quarterback Mike Merritt will look to hook up with Bond and senior wide receiver Trevor Lavine.

Outside linebackers Brendon Wahlers (junior) and Ted Capparino (senior), and juniornose guard Mike Lewczyk lead the JCSC defense.

MSC leads the overall series 23-0 and JCSC has lost its last seventeen games in a row.

Women's soccer wins last game, finishes 9-7-1

by Maureen K. McLeer

The MSC women's soccer team won its last game of the season, defeating Manhattan College 2-1 on Oct. 24, in New York. The victory gave MSC a respectable 9-7-1 record for the season.

Junior midfielder Linda Hadshinow scored 28:32 into the second half to snap a 1-1 tie and lead the Red Hawks to victory.

Hadshinow's winning goal came on a 25-yard shot that went just under the Manhattan crossbar.

MSC got its first goal on a 20-yard direct kick by junior forward Karen Vorhees. The Red Hawks outshot the Jaspers 12-8.

Head coach Peter Latartara was happy with his team's performance, although they were disappointed that they didn't get an invitation to the NCAA tournament.

The third-year coach said that one particular game really pleases him when it comes to mind.

"The best game we played all year was the Manhattanville game," said Latartara. MSC won the non-conference game 10-0 on Oct. 8.

Although the score represents a blowout, the women played at their peak to defeat a quality opponent that entered the game with a 10-8 record.

Latartara was pleased with his team's overall performance in '92.

"The team played well all year, and we have a very young team. Everyone will return next year with the exception of senior Kim Drager," said Latartara.

Drager was considered a major contributor on defense.

Next season's outlook is good due to the fact that nearly the whole team returns with experience. The program also hopes to add talent via incoming freshmen or transfer students.
